

Best beds: The Cotswolds

Location, vibe or price? Whatever you want, we've got it sussed. Here's the how and why

The sprawling estate: Lucknam Park	The B&amp;B: Calcot Peak House
No two rooms are the same at this centuries-old pile, so there are six different tariffs , from £340, B&B. Check for offers, mind: you can get that down to £255 (01225 742777, lucknampark.co.uk).	There are three bedrooms: a double and a twin (from £95, B&B), and a single (from £75, B&B). Only one party can book at a time — so if you're a couple, you'll have the place to yourself (01285 721047, sawdays.co.uk).
Right on the Cotswolds' southern, less pretty, tip. The hotel has 200 glorious green hectares of its own , though — that's practically a whole Cotswold!	Surrounded by walkable fields
Leather-bound volumes in the library, livery at the stables, a Michelin star for the restaurant... it ought to be stuffy here , but the young staff and sleek new spa/brasserie wing keep things feeling fresh.	Stylishly homely: tartan carpet and antler lampshades inside; hill-view patio for a glass of wine outside. You're in owners Alex and Tom Pearson's home, but the private living room and landing ensure privacy.
Four-posters, fireplaces, swags &amp; sash windows	Bedrooms are muted, with pristine white linen and cashmere blankets, elegant fireplaces and botanical prints on the pale grey walls. The bathroom is shared, but rooms have Art Deco sinks.
Dinner in the posh resto is memorable — though perhaps more for its elegance than the food itself — but at the brasserie, the menus barely change, so you may get bored over a long weekend.	Alex makes delicious cakes for tea, and lavish breakfasts, including her own Bircher muesli, and eggs from the speckled hens clucking round the garden.
The spa. Country-house hotels often pass off old basements that way, but this one's a spacious, curvaceous beauty: you could spend whole days (for free!) in its theatrically steaming indoor/outdoor hot tub.	The well-stocked, on-the-house drinks cabinet in the living room; slurp a homemade sloe gin by the log fire.
There's all those hectares — and bikes to borrow, too — but when we asked about suggestions for a nice walk or cycle, we got shrugs and blank looks.	There's no shower cubicle , just an attachment on the bath (though that is huge, and thoroughly wallow-worthy). And fibre optics haven't made it this far, so wi-fi is patchy, as are phone signals.
Lucknam's money shot is driving up the avenue of 400 trees (used to hide Spitfires in WWII). Arrive by daylight, because it's wasted in the dark.	Go to St Peter & St Paul Church in near by Northleach on a Sunday morning and you might catch local resident Steve Winwood playing the organ.

The country house: Buckland Manor
Classic doubles start at £195, B&B; pay £35 more for your own patio in the small deluxe Garden room, or from £480 for the gorgeous double-aspect Vaulted room (01386 852626, bucklandmanor.co.uk).
Near Broadway, in the north of the Cotswolds. Neighbouring Stanton is the kind of village you'd expect to see in a Sunday-evening Austen adaptation.
Old-fashioned, in a reassuringly elegant way — expect tennis and croquet in summer, cosy corners and blazing fires in winter. Great for a hushed, grown-up escape.
All 15 rooms are in the main house, and all have oak panelling, heavy wools and velvets and lashings of figurines and pot plants. There's no kettle, but a morning tea tray and paper are delivered to your room.
Menus impressed the AA inspectors, who awarded it three rosettes; chef Will Guthrie's dishes make excellent use of local ingredients — breast of Adlestrop partridge with pearl barley and mulled plums, say.
Brill service — the GM is a Jeevesian pro
The thermostat's set for the comfort of older guests, so the bedrooms can get a bit stuffy in winter.
Ask nicely and you can borrow Oscar, the hotel's golden labrador , for a walk round the grounds or along the Cotswold Way, which runs just behind the hotel.

The townhouse: The Feathers
Doubles start at £159, B&B, but if you're in the market for an upgrade, go for a Feature room (from £199) — No. 28 has great views down Market Street (01993 812291, feathers.co.uk).
On the eastern edge of the Cotswolds, on the doorstep of Churchill's stately birthplace , Blenheim Palace, in tourist-beloved Woodstock.
Clients are a mix of mini-breakers, booze hounds ( the bar has 253 varieties of gin ) — and film crews. Cast members from Bond film Spectre holed up here while filming at Blenheim Palace.
Antique pieces (suite 4 has a bust of Churchill) are mixed with contemporary art, patterned wallpaper and funky upholstery in bold colours ; beds are big and super-comfy; bathrooms spotlessly modern.
Dinner is a sophisticated affair — the tasting menu is a good-value £55. And there's the gin bar — go local (Cotswolds Distillery gin) and exotic ( 1724 tonic made from quinine berries picked on the Inca Trail ).
Sunny day? Make a beeline for the lovely sheltered courtyard.
The bar can feel like a waiting room
The Feathers doesn't have a car park, so parking can be tricky. But ignore the parking restriction signs — the rules have changed and if you've bagged a space, keep it.

The pub with rooms: The Porch House
The Standard doubles, from £99, B&B, are small, but you're away from the pub hubbub . Superior and Feature rooms (from £129 and £159, B&B) have more character (01451 870048, porch-house.co.uk).
North Cotswolds, in the heart of Stow-on-the-Wold — prime antiques-hunting territory . Have a good rummage through the bric-a-brac in Vintage & Paint, a few doors down.
As you'd hope from England's oldest inn (it dates back to 947AD), the Porch House has nooks and crannies for every mood — leather-banquette dining room, games-filled snug or flagstoned bar.
Comfort, charm and character are the watchwords here, with handmade Feather & Black mattresses and hot-water bottles hanging from bathroom doors.
Bring an appetite: from oozy Welsh rarebit to roast Barbary duck breast, the food is hearty stuff. A stand-out breakfast spread is served in the conservatory , including honeycomb and crumpets.
Free tea, toast and newspaper in bed
There's that usual incompatibility between old properties and accessibility: the main building is a bit of a higgledy-piggledy warren of corridors and sometimes narrow staircases.
Don't fancy Stow's chintzier tearooms? The retro-trendy Burrow Cafe on Sheep Street does top-notch coffee, homemade cakes and vintage board games.

Or try...

£89 The Fish Because: The family-friendly Fish, near Broadway, has 67 relaxed, Scandinavian rooms and 160 hectares of grounds to romp (or Segway) through; under-3s stay free. Doubles from £89, B&B (01386 858000, thefishhotel.co.uk).	£120 The Plough Inn Because: This lovely Kelmscott pub has recently been fancied up, with great British food, sunny garden benches and cosy bedrooms. Doubles from £120, B&B (01367 253543, theploughinn.kelmscott.com).
£110 Windy Ridge Estate Because: This rambling old B&B outside Stow-on-the-Wold isn't over-polished — but that's part of the charm, along with its huge arboretum. Doubles from £110, B&B (01451 830465, windy-ridge.co.uk).	£175 The Wild Rabbit Because: The cute kid's four-poster in the Hedgehog room is a highlight in Kingham's organic, rustic-luxe village-pub-come-restaurant. Doubles from £175, B&B (01608 658389, thewildrabbit.co.uk).
